I have purchased Microsoft products for many years, their products are far superior than any other products on the market. I do not feel that they have done any wrong in this situation. They attempt to innovate and improve the PC and software industry.

Its only the those that are unable to keep pace with Microsoft that want to alter the "playing field".

So can you tell me what the difference is that microsoft has internet explorer on some PC's and other PC's have AOL as the default. When I purchased this PC I was forced into using AOL, and I did not like it so I removed it.

PS. My next upgrade will be microsoft XP.
